INTRODUCTION

Contents of this Document

1. This document contains draft Forms to accompany the draft Administrative Instructions proposed in document PCT/AAQ/III/2.
2. The draft Forms, however, cover only those to be employed by the International Authorities under Chapter I of the PCT: namely, the Receiving Office, the International Searching Authority, and the International Bureau. The Forms to be employed under Chapter II of the PCT shall be covered in a draft which will be presented to a subsequent session of this Subcommittee.
3. The draft Forms have been first submitted to this Subcommittee since most of them interest the members of this Subcommittee in several capacities: as prospective receiving Offices as well as prospective International Searching and/or Preliminary Examining Authorities. Once the advice of this Subcommittee has been given, the Forms will be revised accordingly, and they will be submitted to the PCT Interim Committee for Administrative Questions, probably at the first subsequent session thereof.

Distribution of the Material between the draft Administrative Instructions and the draft Forms

4. In drafting the Administrative Instructions and the Forms, one may hesitate how much of what must be provided for, should be dealt with in the various provisions (called "Sections") of the Administrative Instructions and how much in the Forms. The system adopted in the drafts presented is based on two principles, namely: (i) that as much as possible should go into the Forms, and (ii) that whatever results from the Forms should not be repeated in the Sections of the Administrative Instructions. The reason for the first is that the Form is more easy to understand than any text since the Form not only contains but to a great extent also illustrates the practical application of any prescription. The reason for the second is that duplication should be avoided as much as possible and it would be impossible to avoid a lot of duplication if the text of the Sections would direct what each Form must contain.

The Forms

5. The major emphasis in drafting the Forms was placed on substance rather than layout, that is, on the contents of the Forms rather than the physical aspects of the Forms. It is proposed to consider layout at a later stage, once the contents are agreed upon. The great importance of layout, however, is recognized. The text and other indications contained in a given Form will have to be so arranged as to best facilitate typing, machine tabulation and any other data processing. Adequate space will have to be left for any text to be filled in. The addressee of the Form will have to appear in a place easily detected and, in some cases, in a manner which allows the use of envelopes with a window. The best economical and yet secure means of signing, sealing or otherwise authenticating the Form, when used, will have to be studied too. It is proposed, however, that discussion of these and any other question concerning layout should be reserved for a subsequent session of the Subcommittee.

6. Once the contents of the Forms are established, the International Bureau intends--for a subsequent session of the Subcommittee--to complete some of them with explanatory notes and/or (more complete) references to those provisions of the Treaty, Regulations and Administrative Instructions which are particularly involved.

7. It is recognized that the Forms proposed do not cover all the conceivable situations in which communications under the PCT will be necessary. Some of these communications will require letters rather than Forms. This is particularly true for communications by national Offices in their capacity of designated or elected Offices. It is proposed that a subsequent session of the Subcommittee deal with communications by national Offices in the said two capacities and possibly with model letters and Forms for such Offices in the said capacities as well as with any Forms connected with Chapter II of the PCT.

8. The Standing Subcommittee is invited to comment on the draft Forms contained in this document.
