Nissa Kinzhalina Bureau

The profile details Nissa Kinzhalina's journey from a small town in northeastern Kazakhstan to become one of the country's only independent female entrepreneurs. Ever since she was a young girl, Nissa Kinzhalina loved to study the wide-open spaces of Kazakhstan's steppe. She spent her days inventing imaginary worlds while sketching new realities in her mind.

Through these observations, she developed a unique form of spatial awareness that allows her to imagine physical objects and how they look from different angles, even if those objects don't yet exist.

After studying Japanese architecture at university, Kinzhalina launched her own furniture brand. In 2015, she participated in her first design exhibition in Moscow, displaying her iconic Urban Philosophy Chair. The exhibition was a great success.

Today, Kinzhalina employs the Japanese concept yugen, meaning inner duality, to tell unique stories through design. Nissa Kinzhalina exhibited her works in Moscow, Milan, Paris, London, Hong Kong, and Tokyo.
