Relationship of the Organization with intellectual property matters, including a full explanation of why you are interested in the issues under discussion by the Committee (Maximum 150 words)

International Law, Intellectual Property (IP) rights, and indigenous peoples' legal traditions are a prominent focus of CIGI International Law Research Program [ILRP]. The ILRP has engaged in wide consultations with policy makers, academia and industry representatives on a number of core issues within the field of IP, and continues to position itself as a global research leader within the field of IP. Under this IP theme, the ILRP has identified research into issues surrounding the protection of TK and biodiversity as a priority.

- 1) An international roundtable discussion was, therefore, convened last year in Toronto, to engage with and design a research agenda on TK and biodiversity.
- 2) CIGI-ILRP is also collaborating with a research group at the Faculty of Law, University of Ottawa to build Aboriginal capacity of access and benefit sharing (ABS) in the context of genetic resources and derivative products and innovations, and facilitating constructive engagement among all stakeholders.
- 3) CIGI-ILRP is developing a network of indigenous international law experts to guide its research in this field.

The issues of TK, TCEs and GRs under discussion within the Committee are thus of direct relevance and importance to the research agenda of CIGI. This application is motivated by CIGI's desire to learn, share results, build networks as well as contribute directly to developments within the Committee.

Main activities of the Organization: (Please use a bulleted list)

ESA's main activities are as follows:

- information of members regarding all issues relevant for the activities of ESA;
- consultation of members and position-forming on all issues key for the business of members (these include in particular: seed marketing regulations; plant health; intellectual property; access to genetic resources; seed treatment; biotechnology);
- representation of positions towards the relevant institutions at European and international level (see above);
- guidance to members on relevant legislation

Relationship of the Organization with intellectual property matters, including a full explanation of why you are interested in the issues under discussion by the Committee (Maximum 150 words)

Seed companies invest up to 20% of their annual turnover in developing new varieties. Such varieties need effective IP protection since, being self-reproducing biological material, they are particularly easy to copy. At the same time, since breeding is a process where a new plant variety is always based on already existing ones and can only be created by the physical use of genetic material, access to all forms of plant material, including protected varieties, is indispensable for a successful plant breeding industry. This balance is ensured under the plant variety protection system established by the UPOV Convention (via the "breeder's exemption" under Article 15) as well as under certain national patent laws and the UPC Agreement (see Article 27(c)). Since it is key for ESA's members to safeguard this balance on an international level, the discussions in the IGC on IP, genetic resources and traditional knowledge are particularly relevant.

Country in which the Organization is primarily active:

ESA is registered and based in Belgium and its activities are mostly exercised in Belgium due to the presence of EU institutions. However, our activities cover and are relevant for our full constituency, being geographical Europe.

Additional Information:

Please provide any additional information which you feel may be relevant (maximum 150 words)

Plant breeding is the science of recombining the genetics of existing plant varieties with the purpose of creating something new. It is a process from genetic resource to genetic resource, therefore access to existing genetics is the basis of plant breeding. The aim of a plant breeder is always to obtain the best possible combination of genetics responding to the determined breeding goals which implies that access to the widest possible genetic variability is key for a successful breeding program. In today's world, with the always growing population it must be ensured that there is always enough, good quality food available for which continuous, facilitated access to all genetic material is necessary.

For these reasons, ESA is closely involved in all discussions related to access and benefit-sharing at the FAO International Treaty on Plant Genetic Resources for Food and Agriculture; the CBD and the European Commission since many years.

Por lo tanto, cabe la posibilidad de que determinadas organizaciones no reciban acreditación para asistir a las sesiones del Comité. En tal sentido, en caso de que la Organización que solicite acreditación no tenga sede en Ginebra, quizá no resulte aconsejable desplazarse a esa localidad con el único fin de participar en la sesión del Comité hasta que se haya recibido la acreditación.

El proyecto ETNOMAT consiste en una investigación comparada sobre las Expresiones Culturales Tradicionales, en particular sobre las cuestiones sociales, económicas y políticas que plantea su producción, uso y comercialización, así como su conceptualización como una propiedad intelectual (PI). La investigación se centra en los procesos mediante los cuales ciertos objetos, y no otros, se convierten en marcadores étnicos, y asimismo en los procesos que provocan que algunos de esos objetos se vean envueltos en controversias sobre los derechos de PI. Estos temas son de gran interés para la economía cultural del siglo XXI, presidida por una creciente globalización y etnicización. La mercantilización de los productos asociados a determinadas culturas, así como las demandas para controlar los derechos que tales productos suscitan, es un proceso que se encuentra ya en marcha, aumentando con ello la preocupación acerca de quiénes deben beneficiarse de la explotación de imágenes, diseños o conocimientos tradicionales.

País en el que opera principalmente la Organización:

España, Guatemala, Panamá, Cabo Verde, Reino Unido, Senegal.

Información adicional:

Indique cualquier otra información que considere pertinente (hasta un máximo de 150 palabras).

Para el proyecto ETNOMAT es fundamental asistir a los debates que tienen lugar en las sesiones del CIG durante el año 2016 y 2017. Solo con el seguimiento de estas sesiones podremos tener una visión global del fenómeno que nos interesa estudiar y conocer los últimos desarrollos jurídicos que afectarán los contextos locales que estudiamos etnográficamente.
